Heart health

Medications, blood pressure and heat

Hot weather can be harder on people with high blood pressure, especially if they take medicine. Some blood pressure medicines can make you lose more water. When it's hot and you sweat more, this can lead to dehydration.

Other medicines can make it harder for your body to cool down or adjust to the heat. Heat can also lower blood pressure by causing blood vessels to relax. Together, heat and medicine can sometimes make people feel dizzy or weak.

Drinking water, staying cool and paying attention to how you feel can help protect your heart during hot weather.

Preventive care

Keep your skin safe from the sun

Spending time outside is fun and good for your health. It helps you move your body and feel less stressed. You can enjoy being outside and still keep your skin safe from skin cancer.

Most skin cancers are caused by too much sunlight. The sun gives off ultraviolet (UV) rays. You cannot see UV rays, but they can hurt your skin. UV rays also come from tanning beds and sunlamps. Over time, they can damage skin cells.

How to protect your skin

The easiest way to protect your skin is by using sunscreen. Wearing long sleeves, sunglasses and a wide-brimmed hat also helps. Try to stay away from tanning beds. If you want your skin to look tan, use sunless tanning lotions or sprays instead.

Check your skin once a month. Look for changes in the size, shape or color of moles or spots. If you notice any changes, call your doctor and make an appointment.
