

The fight against COVID-19 can be waged by everyday people—like you

If you've experienced COVID-19, you may be able to help our researchers find ways to help prevent and treat the virus.

Here's what your participation might look like:

Join the COVID+ Community

Signing up is easy. Visit www.UnitedInResearch.com/covidcommunity or scan this QR code with your mobile phone to get started. You can learn more about volunteering for some COVID-19 studies, and if you want to get involved, we'll ask a few screening questions to determine your eligibility.

We match you with COVID-19 studies

We have multiple studies running at any given time and are continually adding new ones. We'll let you know each time we find a study that may be of interest to you. Examples may be:

- Testing the effectiveness of available FDA-authorized COVID-19 therapies
- Tracking long-term symptoms of those who've had COVID-19
- Researching antibodies in people who've tested positive for COVID-19

You decide whether or not to join a COVID-19 study

You'll be able to learn more about each study, what participation looks like, and how long it lasts—before deciding whether or not to voluntarily enroll in a COVID-19 study.

You may be helping science and your community.

Being involved in one of our studies helps researchers and doctors learn more about COVID-19, and how to help prevent and treat it. But that's not all. You also may help others who might become infected in the future.

Questions? Give us a call at 855-678-4166.